Gwayakocchigewin Limited Partnership and Hydro One enter into an agreement to advance the Waasigan Transmission Line project

Through this industry-leading agreement with Hydro One, First Nations communities will have the option to invest in a 50 per cent equity stake in a new transmission line that will support electricity reliability and economic growth in northwest Ontario

Today, Hydro One announced it entered into an agreement with Gwayakocchigewin Limited Partnership representing nine First Nations to advance the Waasigan Transmission Line project.

“The Northwestern Ontario Municipal Association strongly supports and celebrates Hydro One’s announcement of their new partnership,” said Wendy Landry, Mayor of Shuniah and President of the Northwestern Ontario Municipal Association. “NOMA has long advocated for reliable power to support community and industry growth. This is an important collaborative effort to support economic growth in the region and meet the future electricity demands for Northwestern Ontario which is expected to significantly increase. We are all stronger when we work together.”

“I would like to thank Hydro One for all your efforts in establishing this critical partnership that will provide a source of revenue to the First Nations communities that have joined in this agreement, said Wendy Landry.”

Dear Dan,

Thank you for your important information on the signing of Hydro One with nine First Nation communities from the Thunder Bay area with Hydro One. We understand this will be the first project in Hydro One's history to partner with First Nation communities on this type of project. It should help secure a brighter future for the First Nation communities.

We certainly appreciate this electrical transmission power line that will benefit our town of Atikokan as the line will come from Shuniah to Atikokan and then go to Dryden. We sure like this and will work with Hydro One to help make it happen.

Thanks again for your good work.

Yours truly,

Dennis Brown
Mayor
